

ABSTRACT

An integrated circuit fabricated on a single substrate that includes a data bus and 5 purpose-specific functional units connected to the data bus. The functional units include a JPEG decoder and a printhead interface. A general-purpose processor is also connected to the data bus and controls the functional units by running software that coordinates the functional units to receive, expand and print pages.